YANCEY, Benjamin Cudworth Letters 1846-82
Charleston, S. C. 102 pieces

Benjamin Cudworth Yancey was born in Charleston, S. C., in 1817. His father died when he was only a few months old and his mother returned to Ga. There they remained until 1822 when the mother married N. S. S. Beman and went to Troy, N.Y. Benjamin was educated at the U. of Ga. and at York. About 1838 he joined his brother, Wm. Lowndes, in Alabama where he farmed and published the Wetumpka Gazette. (For more detailed sketch see National Cyclopedia of American Biography, XIII, 560.)

YANCEY -2-

This collection begins in 1846 after B. C. Yancey had married Sarah Paris, daughter of Thos. Napier Hamilton, Columbia Co., Ga., and after he had returned to S. C. and was practicing law at Hamburg and was in the state legislature. After about ten years at Hamburg, he went (1851) to his Coosa river plantation (probably in Dallas Co., Ala.). The letters of this period deal with plantation affairs. There is a letter from James Hamilton, Feb. 27, 1859, which deals with the settlement of the estate of T. N. Hamilton and which reveals that good slaves were at that time bringing from $1,000 - $1,700. In 1858 Yancey went to Argentina as minister resident. These are exceptional letters in that they tell of the difficulties that Yancey had in negotiating a treaty with that South American state (1859). By Aug. 1861, Yancey was with Cobb's Legion at Petersburg, Va. The Civil War letters of this collection are from Mrs. Yancey, who lived in Atlanta at least during the first year of the war. Her letters have a great deal to say about business affairs, and especially the trouble people with were having with slave labor. After the war Yancey lived on a plantation near Albany, Ga. The letters of this period are few and little can be gained from them.

Yancey's son, Hamilton (c. 1848) was a student at the U. of Ga. in 1866 and at the U. of Va in 1868. His daughter, Mary Lohise (b. 1851) probably went to school in Staunton, Va.

In addition to the letters of Benjamin C. and Sarah (Hamilton) Yancey there are some from their children Caro, Hamilton, Mary Louise, (Caro Yancey was a daughter by a former marriage), from cousins and from Eve, Jeannie and Rebecca Hamilton, sisters of Mrs. Yancey. There is one from Wm. Lowndes Yancey.

The collection is especially valuable for the information that it contains on plantation life and for Yancey's part in negotiation ghe treaty with Argentina.

William Lowndes Yancey (Aug. 10, 1814-July 28, 1863) was born in Ogeechee Shoals, Ga., the son of Benjamin C. Yancey who was a lawyer of Abbeville, S.C. Trained as a lawyer, W. L. Yancey moved to Ala. in 1836. There he edited the Cahaba Democrat and the Wetumpka Argus. He served in the legislature and in 1844 was elected to Congress but resigned in 1847. He was an ardent state rights advocate, opposed the compromise of 1850, and urged secession. He was a member of the Confederate Congress at the time of his death. The two letters are concerned with politics.

Harper's Ferry, Jefferson Co., W. Va.

Solomon Vance Yantis was born in Jefferson Co., W. Va., on Sept. 21, 1826 and died in 1899. He was the son of Isaac Yantis. He married Josephine Jones of Fauquier Co., Va., and settled at Harper's Ferry. There he was a tobacconist, secretary and part owner of the company that operated the flour mill of the town, served on the city council, and was for a number of years postmaster. He and his wife had seven children: Shaulter Vance, Arnold Stevens,

Eleanor, Gertrude W., Margaret M., Josephine A., and Laura S. (See History of West Virginia Old and New, and West Virginia Biography, Vol. II., p. 395.)

The correspondence begins in late 1870, and this letter relates to relief for sufferers from a flood at Harper's Ferry. This letter and one written at the beginning of 1871 are addressed to the Baltimore American in answer to its attack upon the work of the Relief Committee at Harper's Ferry in distributing the contributions made for the sufferers from the flood. Each of these letters is from a group of citizens of the town, and the second one is from the committee itself.

A letter of 1871 from the President of Western Maryland College states that Yantis' son, Arnold Stevens, will be admitted to the college. The son's letters to his parents follow after he arrives at school. He naturally writes about college life.

A letter of 1872 from a brother of Mrs. Yantis in Ellensburg, Oregon, gives the daily capacity of the salmon cannery in the town, and contains other comments about lumbering, the town, and the quality of the citizenry who are settling that area.

The bills and receipts relate to the purchase of tobacco and flour and other items. A receipt book contains receipts for rent paid by Solomon V. Yantis to James McGraw from 1889 to 1893.

Yarnall, Francis Cope. Papers.

Wynndown, Overbrook, Montgomery Co., Penn.

Francis Cope Yarnall (1830-1890), businessman and member of a prominent Philadelphia family, was among the best known of railroad executives and coal operators in the area. He was largely interested in the development of slate quarries in the old Bangor region. He was vice president of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Co., president of the Lehigh and Lackawanna Railroad, vice president of the Lehigh and Susquehanna

Railroad, and one of the directors of the Mortgage Trust Company of Pennsylvania. Yarnall was born on May 4, 1830, the son of Edward Yarnall who was a wholesale druggist, director of the North American Bank, philanthropist, and member of the Society of Friends. Francis Yarnall married Mary Coale of Baltimore. McElroy's Philadelphia Directory for 1854 lists Francis and Edward Yarnall--and also Ellis Yarnall--in the mercantile firm of E. & C. Yarnall & Co. with Other Memories Literary and Political (New York, 1899), was apparently a near kinsman.

Ellis Yarnall and his family, career, and extensive connections in England are discussed in Ellis Paxson Oberholtzer's Philadelphia, A History of the City and Its People, IV, 354-359.

Information about Francis Yarnall is in his obituary notices in The Evening Bulletin (Philadelphia), June 27, 1890, pp. 3, 6, and in Thomas Richardson of South Shields, Durham County, England, and His Descendants in the United States of America (New York, 1929) compiled by Mary Thomas Seaman. Copies of some of this material are filed in the collection.

The collection consists of a volume entitled "Letters on Slavery, F.C.Y., 1853" (88 pp.) and a small number of clippings, some loose and some mounted within the volume. The spine of the book, the bookplate, and the copies of letters inside all bear Francis Yarnall's name or initials. The handwriting is presumably his. If not, the volume is at least a contemporary copy since the clippings date no later than 1861.

Yarnall, Francis C.

The volume has essentially two parts, a wide-ranging discussion of the institution of slavery in the South (25 pp.) and a series of letters (48 pp.), 1853-1854, between Yarnall and a Professor M. in New York in which the discussion is continued. Yarnall toured the South and his article is dated at Huntsville, Alabama, in March, 1853. He was opposed to slavery but not an advocate of sudden abolition. He was sensitive to the complexity of the subject, and his is an unusually elevated, dispassionate presentation. The comprehensive nature of the work may be noted by listing some of the aspects of the subject that were discussed: condition and treatment of the slaves; character of the blacks; house servants; field hands; planters; overseers; black drivers; the agricultural system evaluated; cruelty to slaves and how it was handled by the legal system and in actual practice; fugitive slaves; education and religious instruction; the internal slave trade; the effects of slavery on the white population and upon Southern economic development; the relation of cotton culture and slavery; the effects of Northern agitation; the attitudes of Southerners to slavery and to public opinion; the effect of advances in transportation; colonization in Africa; and the relation of Christianity and slavery.

The article is supposed to be based upon extensive observations and inquiries. In the letters between Professor M. and Yarnall, the latter reveals more hostility to slavery. Although Professor M. hoped for an eventual end or amelioration of slavery, he defended it upon both practical and philosophical grounds. The letters, therefore, continue and sometimes extend and amplify the points made in the article. Professor M. defended slavery, and Yarnall attacked it. It is not clear whether Professor M. was an actual person or a literary device. Some additional topics in the letters are: the condition of blacks in Africa; labor in the North; inequality as a condition of life; the role of an advanced race in elevating the less advanced; the possible evils of abolition; prejudice in the North and South; emancipation in Jamaica; the Fugitive Slave Law; the loss of leaders as Clay, Calhoun, and Webster; Southern slave (Continued on next card)

Richard Yates (1815-1873), senator and governor, was born in Warsaw, Kentucky, the son of Henry and Millicent (Yates) Yates. He received his education at Illinois College, from which he graduated in 1835, and at Transylvania University, where he studied law. After his admittance to the Illinois bar in 1837, Yates practiced law in Jacksonville. His wife was Catherine Geers, whom he married in 1839.

Yates served in the Illinois legislature, 1842 to 1846 and 1848 to 1850; in the U. S. House of Representatives, 1851-1855; and as a delegate to the Republican National Convention in 1860 and 1868. In 1861, he began a four-year term as governor of Illinois. His son Richard (1860-1936) followed in his father's footsteps when he was elected governor in 1901. During his tenure in the U. S. Senate, 1865-1871, Yates favored the use of vindictive measures against the South.

On the outbreak of the war he was made captain of company G, composed of Pitt and Green County men. He served throughout the war and was colonel of the 68th N.C. regiment in 1865. He was a member of the North Carolina general Assembly in 1865.

The collection contains some routine correspondence regarding the movement of troops

Yellowley, Edward Clements. Sketch (2)

On one letter J.W.Hinton wrote that any extra supplies of meat should be sent to the northern part of the state for the soldiers' families. G.W.Johnston supported Yellowley for election to the General Assembly in 1864. As Johnston opposed Holden and his peace movements, one may suppose that Yellowley supported the "Southern cause." The collection is valuable for the material that it contains on military affairs in N.C. and for the brief though excellent, sidelights on the political situation in 1864.

An addition of seventy-five pieces made May 2, 1942, expands considerably the biographical scope of this set. It includes a number of speeches or compositions written by Yellowly during his college career, and several of these bear the pencilled comments of his professors. There are also several speeches evidently made while he was practicing law. One of these was delivered shortly after the declaration of war on Mexico.

There are some twenty-two letters of James W. Hinton during the war years, but after 1864 the correspondence reverts largely to family and business correspondence.

Most of the collection consists of letters written between brothers and sisters in the Yonce family. The parents lived in Wytheville, Wythe County, Virginia, and were farmers. The family belonged to the Lutheran faith, and scattered references are made to this. Many of the letters contain fond remembrances and concerns about the folks at home in Wytheville. There were approximately twelve children in the Most of the letters are written from different areas in Virginia where the siblings had scattered, including: Gladesboro, Carroll County; Thorn Spring; Newbern, Pulaski County; and Salem. The family placed a high emphasis on education. At least four of the children taught when they became adults: William, who became a faculty member at Roanoke College, Salem, Virginia, by the early 1870s and where he taught ancient languages and literature, and three of his sisters, Fannie, Janie, and Fran.

The collection contains 127 items, all correspondence. Particularly interesting are letters William wrote to his parents and siblings from Wittenburg College, Springfield, Ohio, from 1847 to 1851, where he was a student. He gives a very good description of student life, his desire to hear from his family and his homesickness. While in college he joined the Philosophian Society, a literary society. The letter he writes on March 15, 1848, is on one of the society's printed tracts. It includes information about the society and lists its members, both active and inactive. While in college he wanted to become a minister. It is unclear whether or not he eventually went into the ministry. He writes of selling books and harvesting in the area around Springfield to make money at the end of some of the school sessions.

On August 22, 1851, William writes about his distaste for slavery. While he says he is against it, he also admits that he does not have a solution as to how it could be ended.

There are several letters written between 1861 and 1864, between sisters in the Yonce family about the affect of the Civil War on their lives. They are primarily from Sophia* in Gladesboro (Sept. 9, 1861; Oct. 1, 1863; Apr. 16, Dec. 1 and 17, 1864; Jan. 19, 1865 and Sept. 2, year not given). She expresses how hard it is to keep up the farm, how badly she misses her husband, James, and how she wishes that the "wicked war" would come to an end. There are references to the Virginia 29th, 45th, and 51st regiments, but it is unclear which regiment James belonged to. The war seems to be an all pervasive influence in her life. In a letter, October 1, 1863, she says she cannot even enjoy preaching as well since the war is going on. James does become ill in the conflict, and he is at one point in Buckner's Hospital in Abingdon, Virginia (Apr. 16, 1864). There are, however, references to him after the war.

There are several letters in the collection from William in Salem, Virginia, after he became a faculty member at Roanoke College. He mentions a bad fire breaking out in one of the buildings on campus in March, 1884, which ruined a valuable mineral collection and many papers of a Professor Davis.

Routinely there are references to various diseases which afflicted both relatives and friends of the Yonces. Diptheria was mentioned several times in the letters from Gladesboro, Virginia (Aug. 29, Oct. 14, Nov. 10 and 30, 1862, and Dec. 1, 1864). Particularly touching is the reaction of both the mother and the father to their son's death from diptheria in letters dated Aug. 14, 1862, and two dated Oct. 14, 1862. Other diseases mentioned include: the cramp (Nov. 25, 1864); fever (Sept. 9, 1861; Nov. 30, 1862; Apr. 29, 1863); influenza (Aug. 17, 1862); liver ailments

(Apr. 29, 1863); measles (Sept. 9, 1861); mumps (June 4, 1872); neuralgia (Apr. 17, 1882); pneumonia (Apr. 29, 1869); smallpox (Aug. 7, 1847; Jan. 4, 1883); throat ailments (3 undated letters); and typhoid fever (Apr. 29, 1869).

In several letters between sisters in the family, recipes are requested and ladies' fashions and clothes are discussed (June 3, 1864 and Apr. 29, 1869).

York, George W. Papers, 1861-1863. Standish,
Cumberland Co., Me. 43 items. Sketch

This collection consists mainly of the letters written by George W. York, while he was serving in the 25th Regt. of Me. Vols., and by Amasa Pray. Subjects mentioned include the 4th Regt. of N. H. Vols.; the Siege of Beaufort (S. C.), 1861, and the Battle of Murfreesboro, 1862-1863; a shipwreck in 1861; Pray's account of a storm off Cape Hatteras, N. C., as seen from a Federal troop transport in 1861; commodity prices (inflated by the blockade) in Fla. in 1862; and the use of tin cans for shipping and preserving food in 1863. Pray admits that he helped plunder Beaufort.

Names mentioned include U. S. Gens. John Milton Brannan, Benjamin Franklin Butler (described in a Federal soldier's letter of May 15, 1861, as the soldiers' "idol"), David Hunter, Ormsby MacKnight Mitchel, and Truman Seymour; and U. S. Admiral Samuel Francis Du Pont.

The chief value of this collection - and it is not very valuable - is the light it sheds on the blockade of Fortress Monroe, St. Augustine, Savannah, Charleston, Beaufort (S. C.), and other Southern ports. Pray's letter of Apr. 10, 1863, discusses the unsuccessful attack three days earlier upon Ft. Sumter by U. S. naval forces, including seven monitors.

York, George W.

Young, James Richard. Papers. Raleigh, Wake County, N. C.

James Richard Young (b. 1853), insurance executive, banker, and dealer in stocks and bonds, served as insurance commissioner of North Carolina from 1899 to 1921. A native of Granville County, he was clerk of the Vance County Superior Court, 1881-1890, and a representative and salesman of insurance. After resigning as insurance commissioner in 1921, he resumed private insurance business and was also engaged in banking and the handling of stocks and bonds. He was president of the Union Trust Company, stocks, bonds, and insurance, and vice president of the Merchants National Bank. A biographical sketch of Young appears in the History of North Carolina (Chicago and New York, 1919), IV, 235.

Young, James Richard

Young's papers date primarily during 1919-1927 and involve his activities in state politics, the insurance business, banking, and the Presbyterian Church. During 1935-1938

Young, James Richard

there are papers of J. Cooper Young, a forest, fish, and game warden in Wake County.

State politics was a topic of 1924 when Young was a supporter of Angus Wilton McLean in his successful campaign for the governorship. Most of the letters date from January and concern an attack made upon McLean's service as managing director of the U. S. War Finance Corporation during 1920-1921. Consequently, they include observations on that organization's work in North Carolina during the depression of the early 1920's, economic conditions, and the problems of agriculture, banking, and the cotton and tobacco trade. Young was chairman of the W. F. C.'s Agricultural Loan Agency office in Raleigh until 1923, and there are occasional letters about it during 1920-1923.

Economic matters and banking were also topics during 1920-1926, especially 1920-1921, because of Young's position at the Merchant's National Bank. He received a liquidating dividend from the bank in 1926, and there is information about its condition in these years.

There is useful information about the insurance business in North Carolina during 1921-1927 in Young's letters and those of other insurance executives. Material about the Union Trust Company's stock and bond interests is scarce. There is virtually nothing about his career as insurance commissioner except for an exchange of letters of March 17 and 19, 1921, about the causes of his resignation.

The state lacked a title insurance company,

Young, James Richard

a void that Young and others attempted to fill in 1921 with the Title Insurance and Trust Company of which he was a stockholder. There are several references to it during that year.

The financial affairs of Vance County and road construction there and elsewhere in the state were noted during 1924-1927 (roads, 1925-1927).

Young was an elder in the Presbyterian Church about which there are scattered letters, 1916-1927, including some about Peace College.

Young, James Richard

7

J. Cooper Young, vice president and general manager of the Union Trust Company, appears in the collection in routine correspondence of the 1920's. In 1935 he (or another member of the family with the same name) was appointed combined forest, fish, and game warden in Wake County. During 1935-1938 there is considerable correspondence and memoranda from his superiors in the N. C. Department of Conservation and Development.

A biographical sketch of Young is in C. Beauregard Poland, Twentieth Century

Young, John, Sr. Papers, 1784 (1784-1837)
1948, Granville County and Franklin County, North Carolina.

John Young, Sr., was a Methodist minister who preached at several churches in early Granville County, North Carolina. The Rev. Mr. Young was born in Warwick County, Virginia, on April 29/May 10, 1747, of Quaker parents, according to his autobiography. He died in 1837, aged ninety-one years.

Both John Young and his father were carpenters and builders, and both were converted to Methodism. John married ca. 1767. He first heard a Methodist sermon by Mr. King in 1778.

Young, John, Sr.

2

In that year he became a Methodist, and led a class in Halifax County, Virginia, where he moved with his wife and his son and daughter. He stated that his real conversion came in 1786. In his autobiography he mentions rough times and itinerant preachers. At this time, August, 1786, he became a licensed Methodist minister living on the Roanoake River in the Roanoake Circuit of the Virginia Conference. About 1788 he moved to Franklin County, North Carolina, where he preached in the Tar River Circuit. Bishop Francis Asbury signed his license as a deacon in 1792, while Bishop

Robert Richford Roberts appointed him an elder in 1819 at Oxford, North Carolina. Mrs. Young (b. 1745) died on Oct. 18, 1813, at Oxford. John Young remarried on Jan. 9, 1814, and wrote his autobiography about this time. He kept a journal, the surviving portion of which dates from late 1814, and he continued this writing until June 25, 1837. His death is noted on August 7, 1837, in the Raleigh Register, which states that he died at Plank Chapel, Franklin County, on July 21, 1837.

The papers of John Young give historical details of many chapels in Granville, Frank-

4

The few surviving letters addressed to Mr. Young are by ministers, presumably district superintendents. The letter of July, 1784, from Ira Ellis of Ellis' Preaching House in Virginia expresses regret that he cannot come to preach in Halifax County. Other correspondents are Lewis Skidmore of Granville Co., James Meacham of Bertie County, William Compton, and Lewellin Jones. The Compton letter of July 7, 1826, concerns a possible schism in Plank Chapel near Oxford, where reformers were to be shut out of the church building, an action which is justified by the book of discipline of the Methodist Church. It is evident that these minister correspondents were itinerant preachers at the various chapels and preaching houses in their districts. Methodist classes, services, and history in these early years is quaintly set forth by the letters and the other writings.

The autobiography of Mr. Young contains 49 pages and is divided into two parts: conversion and doctrine. Through these two sections are scattered biographical data, but Mr. Young was far more concerned with his spiritual life than his earthly one.

His journals cover the last twenty years of his life and are composed of short entries on his ministerial activities. He evidently preached in Oxford, in the homes of many Methodist brethren, and at Bethel, Rock Springs, Kingswood, Concord, Jerusalem, Shiloh, and Plank chapels. He notes that he also preached at Lewisburg, Franklin Co., N. C. Conversions, shouting and weeping, camp meetings, Baptists, doctrine, and funerals fill the pages. Among the preachers mentioned are Brothers Charles

A.[?] Hill, Cook, Drake, Peter Doub, Brock, Orendal[?], Amos Jones Wetherly, Weatherspoon, and Hunt. Mr. Young spoke frequently of "light and liberty" in his preaching and of zealous congregations.

The year 1827 was one of sadness and sorrow, after reformers held a meeting at Plank Chapel. The movement started by them caused great distress in other parts of the Methodist Church and eventually resulted in 1830 in the formation of the Methodist Protestant Church. Mr. Young seems first to have mentioned a Sunday School in

Young, John, Sr.

8

Sept., 1828, at Plank Chapel. On May 24, 1829, Mr. Young writes of deceptions in the Methodist Episcopal church, false lights blinding "Old side Methodists" at Plank Church, and false claims that the preacher has all power in his hands. On August 8, 1830, he writes of the great contention about religion and refers to the fact that all sects are at war with the Methodists. In July, 1831, he explains the doctrine of justification.

The journals often speak of the behavior of congregations, especially when this conduct is good and well-ordered. On Sept. 20, 1832, he describes the attempt to burn Plank Chapel. It is of note that every year on his birthday, May 10, Mr. Young comments on the course of his life.

John Young is referred to as senior, the presumption being that he had a son, John. He mentions a daughter. Another son, Samuel, was living near Concord Chapel in the 1830's.

A copy of a clipping from about April 10, 1948, refers to the Rev. E. H. Davis, who wrote Historical Sketches of Franklin County. The Rev. Mr. Davis lived at the historic home of Green Hill, an early Methodist preacher, and wrote of the first Methodist conferences held in the United States. His history of Franklin County, as well as the Joel King MSS. in this department, are background material for this collection.

This collection consists of Xerox copies made from the originals, which were, on April 18, 1963, in the possession of Mrs. E. O. Young, Sr., 1841 N. Garnett St., Henderson, N. C.

The Raleigh Christian Advocate, Jan. 7, 1880, p. 7, announces the death of Brother John

Young, John, Sr.

Wesley Young on November 24, 1879, aged sixty-five years. He was the son of the Reverend John Young of "precious memory," founder of Methodism in "this part of North Carolina," [Franklin County]. In the North Carolina Directory for 1867 Henderson, N.C., is listed as the home of W. Hamilton Young, P.W. Young, Wesley Young, and Samuel Young.

In 1874 John Wesley Young was listed as a member of the faculty of Trinity College. He came from "rural North Carolina" and had not had a college education. (See Nora Chaffin, Trinity College, p. 292.)

Recatalogued, 2-23-65, the John Wesley Young Papers are from a prominent Methodist family of Franklin Co. John Wesley Young was a son of the Rev. John Young, Sr. (1747-1837) of the Plank Church, Franklin Co., whose papers are in this department. The Young family lived in the Tar River Valley, preaching in the country between Oxford and Louisburg. John Young, Sr., was at Haysville, Franklin Co., on Sept. 30, 1821, when he wrote to the Rev. James Glenn in Edgefield Co.,

Young, John Wesley.

J. E. Glenn had evidently been a member of the Plank Church and replied to Mr. Young concerning camp meetings and his religious work in S.C.

After a lapse the letters begin again in 1841, when the Rev. John Wesley Young receives letters from Maury Co., Tennessee, from his nephews, Wm. W. Young and Wm. A. Gill, describing personal and family matters.

The next group of letters in the Civil War period were written by John W. Young and his brother James A. Young to their father, John W. Young. The son John W. enlisted in Co., E, 9th N.C. Regiment (1st. N.C., Cavalry) in Aug.,

Young, Matilda. Papers. Washington, D. C.

Matilda Young was employed by Mrs. Alva Murray (Smith) Vanderbilt Belmont as a companion during 1932. After Mrs. Belmont died on January 26, 1933, Miss Young began looking for a job with a consulate or embassy, but the results of her efforts are not known. Her papers consist of letters written mainly by her to her mother who lived in Washington, D. C., and a few written to her by family and friends. The letters were written during her residence in France with Mrs. Belmont and contain numerous references to this lady. Also included are comments on Harold Stirling Vanderbilt and Consuelo (Vanderbilt) Spencer-Churchill Balson (formerly the Duchess of Marlborough), Mrs. Belmont's children.

The volume is a memoir of 173 pages written by Mrs. Belmont. She discusses her youth in Mobile, New York, and Paris; her marriage to William Kissam Vanderbilt, Sr., and their subsequent divorce; social life in New York and Newport, Rhode Island; her ideas on child rearing; and her involvement in the suffragette movement and other activities in behalf of women's rights. Extensive descriptions are given of the Vanderbilt homes on Fifth Avenue, now demolished, and at Newport. Her marriage to Oliver Hazard Perry Belmont is noted toward the close of the volume, but the memoir is for the most part devoted to Mrs. Belmont's youth and first marriage.

The letters in this collection came enclosed in an envelope attached to the memoir's original binding, indicating that Mrs. Belmont's memoir at some time became the property of Miss Young.

A biographical article about Mrs. Belmont is: John Sledge, "Alabama's 'Bengal Tiger,' Alva Smith Vanderbilt Belmont," Alabama Heritage, No. 44 (Spring, 1997). A copy is filed with the collection.

P. M. B. Young (1836-96) was born in Spartanburg, S. C., educated in Ga., and at West Point from which he resigned to join the Confederate army. He saw much active service and became a major-general. After the war he entered politics, served several years in Congress, and held consular and diplomatic posts. He died in N.Y. [See D.A.B. XX, 633f.]

This collection contains besides the letters of Young some from his mother, other members of the family and from friends and relatives. There are two from Young when he was a student at Ga. Military Institute in 1854. In April, 1861, he was with the Confederate Army in Florida where he remained for several months before he was sent to Va. The letters are not sufficiently numerous to trace his military career during the first year of the war. There are two letters relative to the Paris Exposition in 1878 of which he was a commissioner. There are also two letters dealing with American investments in Guatemala. Youngg served as minister to Guatemala and Honduras in 1893-96.

1 item added 5-13-57: an undated list of C. S. A. generals and their whereabouts. This is in the handwriting of Young.

4 items added 5-15-58: A document of 1869 on which Young's name appears as a subscriber to a speech of Samuel Fenton Cary; list of subscribers to a speech by Young, 1871; list of subscribers to a speech by John B. Stroun, 1872, on which Young's name appears; and a letter (Nov. 30, 1892) from P. M. B. Young to W. P.

Spartanburg, Spartanburg Co., S. C.

Dr. Robert Maxwell Young (d. 1880), a physician at Spartanburg, S. C., was the father of Pierce Manning Butler Young, the prominent politician and diplomat.

In 1833, 1834, and 1835 Dr. Young and others made trips to the lower South in search of land in which to invest. These trips are discussed in: Lynwood M. Holland, Pierce M. B. Young, The Warwick of the South (Athens, Ga., 1964).

On Jan. 6, 1834, Dr. Young wrote from Marion, Alabama, to his wife at Spartanburg about: the search for land; the suitability of Dallas and Lowndes counties for settlement; plans to investigate land in Talladega County; the great field for speculation in land in the Creek Nation; the shortage of money; why many speculators were unprepared with capital at that time; the arrival and hiring of his slaves; and transportation as related to settlement and economic matters.

Young, Thomas F. Papers. Dover, Strafford
County, New Hampshire

The collection consists of a one-volume diary (126 written pages), kept by Young. His entries date from Aug. 1, 1863, to June 19, 1864. The diary was printed to be used in 1863. Because the penciled entries for both 1863 and 1864 are in one volume, Young obviously began them in Aug., 1863, and at the end of the year began writing in the Jan. section. He changed the year and date in pencil to correspond with 1864.

Young, Thomas F.

Young from Dover, New Hampshire, was in the United States Navy, assigned to the gunboat, U.S.S. Thomas Freeborn. The vessel is listed as a wooden side-wheel steamer in the Official Records of the Union and Confederate Navies in the War of Rebellion. The vessels's and crew's main functions were to protect the shore and to aid and protect other vessels.

Young conscientiously wrote about his own activities, as well as the gunboat's movements. Wanting to hear news about the war and receiving

Young, Thomas F.

3

"a mail" were prevailing concerns. He was located on the shores off Virginia and Maryland during the period covered by the entries. Such locations as the Rappahannock River, Point Lookout on the northern side of the entrance to the Potomac River, Piney Point on the east side of the Potomac River, Tappahannock, a port of entry in Virginia, Saint Mary's River in southern Maryland and the Piankatank River are mentioned often. The Freeborn seems to have been in two different commands, the Potomac Flotilla and the Young, Thomas F.

North Atlantic Blockading Squadron--but mainly in the Potomac Flotilla. The Potomac Flotilla was mainly responsible for the Potomac and Rappahannock Rivers, but the boundary between the two squadrons was changed several times due to political reasons and due to the fortunes of war.

One gets a sense of the periodic chores necessary to maintain a ship and its troops. Getting fresh water, taking on other provisions like food, blowing off steam to clean the boilers and coaling the vessel were routinely mentioned. One also learns about the hazards of keeping a ship afloat. Often Young mentions ships that have gone aground. The Freeborn had to have major repairs done on its engine and boiler. The ship was taken to the Naval Yard in Washington, D.C., for three months while its boiler was being repaired. Both of the ship's ailments were caused by something other than enemy fire. The confiscation of property was mentioned on several occasions. Troop movements

Young, Thomas F.

Young, Thomas F.

up and down the rivers and the number of prisoners located at Point Lookout, Maryland, were commented upon.

In the back of the diary under "memoranda" dated Feb. 21, [1863], he mentioned that his boat was fired on in the Rappahannock River below Fort Lowry, Virginia, and that it was struck three times. He said, "no material damage however." The Freeborn was involved in two other military engagements but both of them took place in 1861 (from the Official Records of the Union and Confederate Navies in the War of the Rebellion). He reports other incidences such as the ship firing its guns toward shore and landing a party of two hundred and fifty troops from their ship with "one howitzer." He said this party captured "wheat, tobacco and various other things."

Young, Thomas F.

Because of the consistency with which he lists both his own activities and concerns and those of the gunboat's one is able to get a good sense of what day-to-day naval life was like.

The Young Men's Christian Association of Hillsboro was organized on December 3, 1888. This volume records the organizational meeting, the constitution and by-laws, and the minutes of meetings. The minutes are continuous from 1888 until August 3, 1891. Two loose sheets contain the minutes of April 4 and May 2, 1892, and are filed inside an envelope attached to the inside back cover.

Entries were kept by the Young Men's Lyceum of Mount Vernon Institute (1860, July 28-Nov. 16) and later by Liberty Academy (1861, Feb. 13-May 15).

A few entries at the end of the volume are for Shop Spring Academy (Shop Spring, Tenn.) (1872, Oct. 7-1873, Apr. 11), but it is unclear whether that Academy is truly a successor to the others. The purpose of the society was the moral and intellectual improvement of its members. Its

Youngman, Isaac B. Papers, 1855-1867. Wilmot
Center, N. H. 16 items. Sketch

The Youngman papers include a number of social family letters from Illinois and New Hampshire, principally from the Perkins family. They are interesting for the letters of two young Union soldiers, Isaac Perkins and John C. Palmer. Perkins gives an account of his move to McHenry Co., Ill., in 1857, and his enlistment in the 15th Ill. Vols. in 1861. The letters begin with a detailed account of where the 15th Regt. had been in Mo., cover its arrival at Pittsburg Landing and casualties there in the battle, relate forced marches and short rations, and finally give, on Aug. 28 & 29, 1862, a graphic and detailed picture of the hospital for Union soldiers at Tipton, Mo. Isaac Perkins was called "Dr. Perkins" by his fellow soldiers because of the volunteer nursing he did in this hospital for the men of his regiment. Though lacking in formal education, his heart-felt picture of the food, hardships, hospital deaths, and physical sufferings of his fellow soldiers is an intensely interesting one. The 15th Ill., part of the First Brigade, Fourth Division,

Army of the Tennessee, under U. S. Grant is kept on the alert, sleeping on its guns. Evidently Grant was having no more surprises like the one at Pittsburg Landing. Perkins relates on Feb. 17, 1863, more troop movements before the order from Grant to Gen. Stephen Augustus Hurlbut to march to Corinth, Miss., where Van Dorn and Price are attacking Rosecrans. He gives an excellent pen picture of the 14th and 15th Ill. regiments meeting the Confederate retreat at Hatchie River, Miss., the resulting charge of his regiment, the appearance of Gen. Ord, and the delay of Rosecrans which resulted in the escape of the Confederates. Ord, Hurlbut, and Veatch are listed as Union commanders. Again troop movements are noted in a letter of Feb. 18, 1863, as is Van Dorn's raid on Grant's base at Holly Springs, Miss., which Perkins visited shortly afterwards. He includes a pen sketch of the cemetery there. His letters end at Holly Springs in Feb. of 1863.

The letters of John C. Palmer, 1863-1864, to Isaac Youngman begin on the Va. coast at Suffolk, and describe on Sept. 2, 1863, the building of fortifications at Portsmouth, Va. He evidently is in a N. H. regiment. Of interest is his account of large numbers of Negroes used as laborers and teamsters. He notes their enjoyment of wages and prayer meetings. Bitter resentment by whites against equipping and training of Negro troops by the U. S. Army is recounted, as is the high price of food. On Apr. 25, 1864, Palmer's regiment camps at Yorktown, Va., where Union troops are collecting. On Sept. 17, 1864, on guard duty at Point of Rocks, Md., he describes fraternizing with Confederate picket lines very close to his station in a redoubt.

The papers conclude with a few social letters just after the war.

This Account Book, 1754-1757 (52 pp.), belonged to a merchant in Virginia who was in the employ of Thomas Yuille, John & George Murdoch, merchants of Glasgow, Scotland. On pages 13 and 14 the person keeping the accounts made entries for twelve months of wages due. In both cases the wages were charged against this Glasgow firm. Presumably the writer was their agent or store manager in Virginia. The identity of the writer remains unknown. George Yuille has been suggested as being the writer. However, accounts appear several times (pp. 31, 38, 51) in which there are entries that simultaneously include figures for both Yuille and the writer who used the pronoun "my" to distinguish his figures. These entries indicate that the writer and George Yuille were not the same person.

The location of the business is not known, except that it must have been in Virginia. There are accounts for such men as Charles Carter, William Byrd, Edmund Pendleton, Theodorick Bland, Sir William Codrington, etc.

The trade involved slaves, shipping ventures, and a variety of commodities. Shipping went to colonial ports and to England, Scotland, and from 1815 for a Thomas West. This volume was formerly cataloged as belonging to Thomas West.

Letters are chiefly addressed to Zane as Chairman of the Advisory Committee on Community Relations, and the remaining letters are addressed to Mayor George Roach and other members of the Advisory Committee. As Chairman, Zane requested the opinions of Greensboro citizens concerning the integration of lunch counters at Woolworth's and Kress. Responses to the Greensboro, N.C. City Council in March 1960, from both Caucasians and African-Americans primarily supported integration. In

Zea, Edward. Papers. Strasburg, Shenandoah
Co., Virginia

Edward Zea, merchant, was a member of the firm of F. M. Zea & Company, dealers in general merchandise at Strasburg, according to a piece of the store's letterhead stationary, ca. 1900. The store was founded in 1845 and operated under several different ownership arrangements, but always with one of the Zeas as a member of the firm.

Sixteen daybooks, 1842-1860, are from this general store and date from its founding in 1845. The earliest daybook also contains accounts of 1842-1845 from a store at Winchester. The Ledger, 1842-1850, also includes accounts from both Winchester and Strasburg. Two other ledgers date during 1868-1870 and 1879-1887.

Edward Zea was treasurer of the Winchester Presbytery of the Synod of Virginia in the years before and after 1900.

One volume, entitled "Winchester Presbytery, Treasurer's Booke, April 12th 1893," is a record of donations made by member churches of Winchester Presbytery to various funds, and of the disbursement of these funds, for the period 1893-1903. More than twenty separate funds are listed, including those for foreign and domestic missions, evangelistic work, education, relief and church construction.

There are two penmanship manuals. One, a Spencerian manual published in 1873, belonged to William Zea. The other is undated.

A printed sheet (ca. 1898) lists contributing and delinquent churches of the Winchester Presbytery.

There are five financial papers listing contributing and delinquent churches, and one

Zea, Edward

authorizing payment to Abner Crump Hopkins for travel expenses.

There are 22 letters, 1896-1902, mostly addressed to Edward Zea, regarding the Presbytery's business, primarily church contributions. A number of different churches in Virginia and West Virginia are represented in these letters as well as in the volume and other items, including those at Berryville, Brucetown, Front Royal, Marlboro Coal Mine, North River, Opequon, Winchester, Charles Town, Elk Garden, Mingo County, Piedmont, and many others.

ZELLAR, Jacob and David Letters & Papers
1788-1895

Hagerstown, Md. 330 pieces

The collection contains the letters and papers of Jacob and David Zellar. Jacob was the executor for the estates of John Rensch and Martin Richenbough. There are numerous receipts and papers connected with these matters. The papers of David Zellar begin about 1825, and they too deal with real estate and legal matters of a related nature. There are a few letters from Union soldiers during the Civil War, but they are not numerous enough to reveal much. There are a few business letters dealing with the sale of lands in Illinois. In 1872 William Zellar went to Massachusetts Agricultural College.

While the collection covers a long period of time, it is predominated by receipts, bills, and notes and it is difficult from this to gain much information about the Zellars.

1 item added 6-7-57; a letter of Samuel Pheasant [?], May 1, 1861, to Zellar concerning one J. Fulenwider.

ZEVELY, Sophia and Augustus Letters 1836-60

[This collection was accessioned under the name of Sophia Zevely, but when addition of 19 pieces, nearly all of which are letters To Sophia's brother, Augustus, was made (June 25, 1942) the collection was made a joint one and the sketch revised]

Augustus, Alexander, Edmund S., and Sophia were the children of Van N. Zevely. Although Salem, N. C., was their original home, all of them except Sophia lived in various other places including Schellsburg, Pa., and Washington, D.C.

Augustus, who seems to have been the eldest, was a physician in Salem. There is a letter to him from Dr. Joseph Pancoast, the eminent Philadelphia surgeon, giving professional advice on a difficult case. (see. letter Feb. 25, 1843.)

Alexander was in Washington, D.C. in the 1830's and 40's, apparently connected in some capacity with the Post Office Department. In a letter of Jan. 9, 1839, he gives a very interesting description of the annual New Years Day reception at the White House. Shorter but similar passages follow in later letters.

Edmund S. Zevely seems to have been the "black sheep" of the family. He was engaged at various times in a number of occupations including publishing, photography, and teaching. His letters indicate that he was the least conventional but at the same time the most likeable member of the family.

Little is revealed about Sophia except that she was of kindly disposition and she was a teacher in the Salem Female Academy. Following 1854 there are several letters to her from a former student, who, at the time of writing, was attending Potapsco Institute at Ellicott's Mills, Maryland. One letter contains a very good account of the daily routine there.

A letter of Aug. 14, 1860, mentions the Loco Foco Party.

Zimmerman, James C. Papers. Forsyth County,
N. C.

James C. Zimmerman and his wife M. Adaline (Spease) were probably originally from Georgia. They evidently moved to Forsyth County, N. C., before 1861. Zimmerman and his brother-in-law, A. J. Spease, enlisted as privates in Company D of the 57th Regiment, N. C. State Troops, on July 4, 1862. Zimmerman was captured in 1864 but was released early the following year before the end of the Civil War.

Zimmerman, James C.

The correspondence which constitutes this collection was exchanged mainly between Zimmerman and his wife during their separation while Zimmerman's regiment was stationed in Virginia. His letters refer to various battles and skirmishes, but their chief value lies in the many comments on desertion and the low morale in the C. S. A. Army. Zimmerman soon became disillusioned with the war and repeatedly expressed a desire for peace so that he could return home. He was not a slaveowner and found no cause to justify a protracted and costly war. His efforts to get a furlough failed for many months, and he threatened several times to desert.

Zimmerman, James C.

A few letters from A. J. Spease were written during the war. He was placed for a time in the guard house and was satisfied with his lot; being in prison would keep him out of battle. The bulk of his correspondence begins in 1866 when he moved to Boone County, Ind. and continues throughout his many moves until he settled permanently at or near Lexington, Lafayette Co., Mo. In addition to descriptions of the various areas in which he lived, a letter of April 30,

Zimmerman, James C.

1868 contains comments on the segregation of the Negro in Missouri, and one of July 2, 1875, noted a grasshopper plague which destroyed several crops in Lafayette County.

Johann Georg von Zimmerman (1728-1795) German physician, describes the state of health of Prince Frederick of England. The Prince suffered from attacks of intermittent fever and convulsive asthma, for which Dr. Zimmerman had prescribed red quinquina, extract of arnica, and pills. If an attack developed during the Prince's journey to England, his attending physician would have Dr. Zimmerman's case history.

Zimmerman, John R. Papers. Alexandria, Va.

John R. Zimmerman, of Alexandria, Virginia, was a Confederate soldier who was captured and put in prison at Point Lookout, Maryland.

After the war he was in the lumber business in Tobyhanna Mills, Monroe County, Pennsylvania.

In this collection the eleven letters written in 1863 and 1864 are from Zimmerman, then a prisoner of war in Maryland, to Mrs. John B. Daingerfield of Alexandria, thanking her and other women of the city for sending packages of clothing, food, medicine, and reading material to the prisoners at the camp. He mentions a few details of life at Point Lookout.

There is a gap in the collection after 1864; when the letters resume in 1871, they are addressed to Zimmerman, then in Tobyhanna Mills, Pa., and are concerned with his work in the lumber business.

The business papers of the Zitterauer family of Ebenezer, Effingham Co., Ga., cover a large group of descendants of Paulus Zitterauer, one of the early Salzburg German settlers who came to Ga. about 1734-35. The bills, receipts, notes, and accounts of Ernst Christian Zitterauer begin in 1772 and cover the activities of a planter dealing in flour, beef, and lumber. A deed for slaves in 1775 is followed by land deeds in 1784-86, an marriage settlement in 1813, more land deeds, and estate inventories, records, and household accounts of David, Gotthilf (God-help), and Ernst Zitterauer, and Catherine Pavery, mother-in-law of William Zitterauer. The papers after 1840 concern Richard Ernst Zitterauer. The Evangelical German Lutheran Church of Ebenezer is mentioned in 1827-29, when Gotthilf Zitterauer gives a bond to the trustees of the congregation; and again in 1872, when R. E. Zitterauer is a trustee.

The manuscript receipt book (1806-18), contains records of John C. Gugel, a relative of Gotthilf. A few records of the Waldhour family are included ca. 1860's.

From the Marmaduke Floyd Collection.

The local pronunciation of Zitterauer is Zet'rou.

Zubly, John Joachim Letters. 1773-1777

~~Savannah, Georgia. Sketch. 5 pieces~~

John Joachim Zubly was born at St. Gall, Switzerland, in 1725 and died in Savannah, Ga., July 23, 1781. It is not known when he came to America, but he took charge, as the first regular pastor, of the Independent Presbyterian Church in Savannah in 1760. He was a member of the Continental Congress in 1774 and there was selected to prepare a petition to the king "upon the present unhappy situation of of affairs." He served also as a member of the committee of correspondence for Georgia. He wrote an emphatic letter to Lord Dartmouth, Sept., 1775, with reference to Dunmore's attempt to incite the Negroes in Virginia to insurrection. He cooperated with the popular party until it was evident that Congress was about to declare the independence of the colonies. Presently he opened correspondence with Sir James Wright and later threw off all disguise and made common cause with the Tories. He was banished from Savannah in 1777 with the loss of half of his estate, and remained in S.C. until Sir James Wright was reinstated in Georgia. Zubly then returned to his pastoral work in Savannah where he remained until his death.

One letter from a committee in Savannah expressed satisfaction that the colonies were uniting to preserve the liberties and privileges of the Americans. Attempts were also made to prevent counterfeiting money. In a brief note, Zubly warned his opponent that legal action was about to commence over some matter.

One item transferred 9-1-44 is a warrant of appraisement in which Zubly is named administrator of the estate of B. Gemel.

One item from the Marmaduke Floyd Collection, 10-6-56, is an indenture made for land by John J. Zubly and his wife Ann to Robert Walton.
